

Ciaran Harris – Director of innovation

Since 2000, Ciarán has spearheaded user interface, multimedia and mobile designs that have helped clients increase revenues and reduce costs. Today, millions of people interact with his designs on a daily basis.

Ciarán joined us in 2008 from Nokia Research, where he solved real life problems in healthcare and was at the forefront of gamification. Since joining iQ, he's created iQ Labs - our innovation space that constantly pushes the frontiers of technology and design - and set up Ireland's first mobile testing lab, part of our very own iQ Studio. He also holds two user interface patents.

Over the past number of years Ciarán has been the design lead with many of our key clients, including Goodyear, Vodafone and Tektronix Communications, and is one of our most experienced retail analysts having worked with Waitrose and Littlewoods amongst others.

Beyond iQ (when he has the time), Ciarán enjoys surfing, snowboarding, reading and most of all, his motorbike.
